

Parent judges who don't speak English

College student judges who only speak pomo

Cold ziti dinners that require a meal ticket your coach never gave you

Cold pizza, $2.00 a slice

Tabrooms that print enough schematics for everyone except you

Tabrooms that leave you off the schematics for all five prelim rounds

Sharing a hotel bed with 37 of your colleagues from the speech team

Sharing a hotel shower with 37 of your colleagues from the speech team

Hitting the top seed at last year's TOC in your first random pairing

In round 5, hitting the kid who got the bye in the Round 4

Your cell phone going off during the middle of your constructive

Your judge's cell phone going off during the middle of your constructive, he answers it and talks until his battery runs out

You go into a round to discover that your opponent has your case and your blocks already pre-flowed

You go into a round to discover that you have neither your case or your blocks in your briefcase

Your judge falls asleep during your second speech

You fall asleep during your second speech

